

Chinaman's Restaurant in Provo, Canyon

The chinaman's restaurant in Provo Canyon was just below Vivian Park. There was a wagon bridge just below Vivian, ^{Park Bridge} and up until this point there was no road along the north side of the Provo River. As we crossed the bridge, the China man's restaurant was on the north side of the road and they were always there, ready to serve 24 hours each day. Since the cafe at this point was the only place on the north side of the river + nothing from there down to Olmstead Power Plant at the mouth of the canyon, most everyone stopped there for food or refreshments at all hours. The China men had all their black hair pulled back straight and braided in a long braid at the back. This was called a que and most of the time it hung way down until some of them could sit on it. They wore black round satin skull caps with black satin trousers and a tan or white blouse over the trousers with some kind of Chinese dragon worked in black embroidery on the back of the blouse. They fed our horse while we were in eating and they always give the kids an all day sucker or some kind of candy when we came out from our meal.

Detta C Green Feb 17 1984 age 85+

A Chinese Restaurant was located to 1924 almost directly across the wooden ^{Rt. of bridge} bridge immediately west of Bridal water There Veil Falls around the turn of the Century (1900-1905.) They received their water from springs rolling up on the north bank of the road which seem to be coming down out of Lost Creek Canyon to the North.

Delta C Green ^(WMP) remembers the Chinese there c long black queues of hair c tiny black skull caps.
They wore 3/4 length black light weight smocks, & they walked on short slit shoes

This was one of the stopping places for the Heber Creeper

Snowslide came down & killed 2 came out from Bridal Veil one one day gone next - sub back wall & chimney were standing

REVIEW

Xerox Corp.'s 6065 Personal Computer

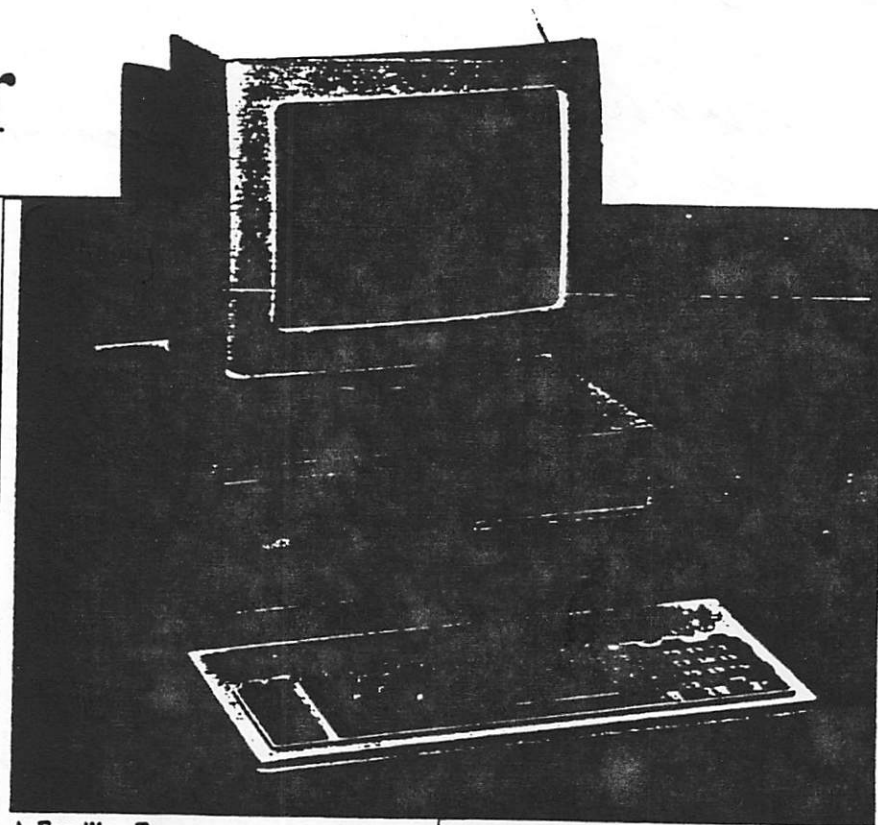

A system whose marked differences in design and function put it well ahead of the IBM PC-compatible pack

BY MARK A. KELLNER

It is the fondest aspiration of most IBM-compatible PC manufacturers to accentuate the similar, while eliminating, or at least minimizing, the different.

However, while most of these companies meet their main objective, providing systems nearly identical to the IBM PC, few offer any real improvements or benefits over their electronic role model, save perhaps a less expensive price tag.

One of the few to go beyond the IBM standard is the Xerox Corp. 6065, the hard disk member of the 6060 series of machines. Dazzling in its speed and performance, the 6065 is a computer notable not only for its IBM PC-compatibility, but for its enhancements.

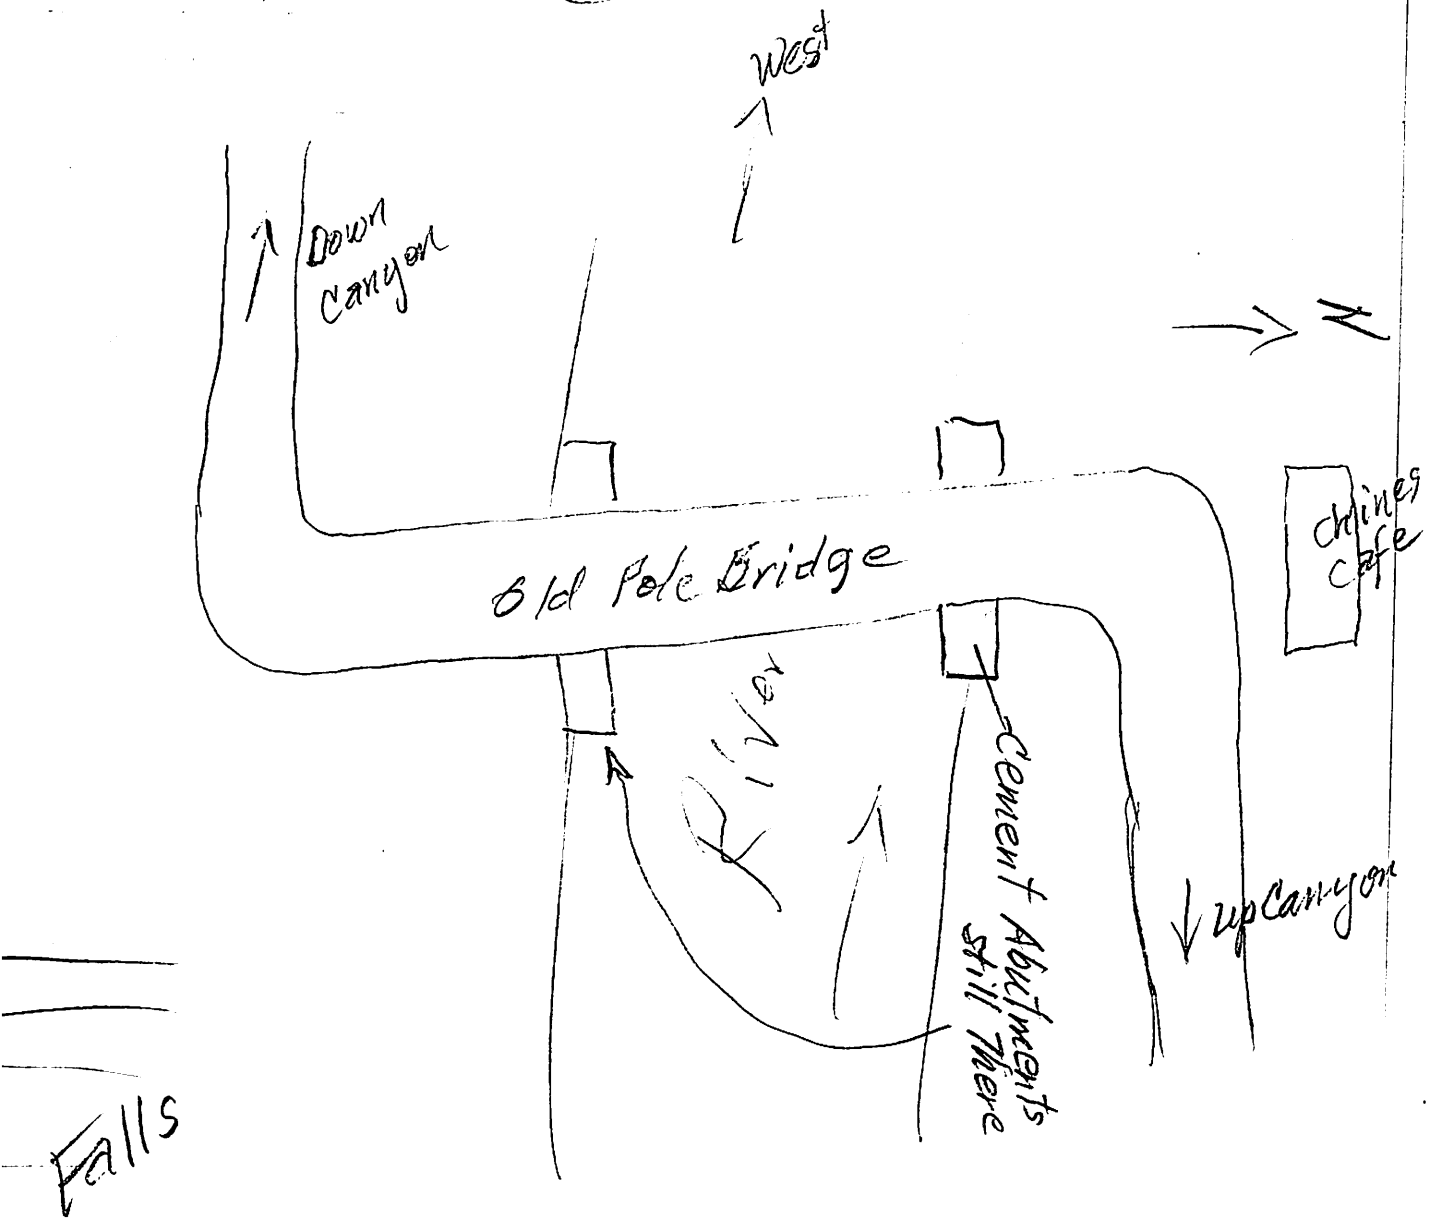

A Familiar Face

At first glance, the Xerox 6065 looks extremely familiar, as well it should, since it features the same chassis, drive mountings, and keyboard used by AT&T for its PC6300, as well as by Docutel and other manufacturers for their systems. The 6065's internal motherboard is also the same as the PC6300's, as is the system's 12-inch monitor.

commands, a user can operate the Xerox 6065 with a simple series of point-and-press steps. (Without the mouse, most of the steps are handled by Function keys.)

The most important plus for the Xerox 6065 is its ability to change into a combination dedicated word processor and personal computer by installing new software and a special keyboard including 12 additional function keys.

Chinese Restaurant @ Bridal Veil

ADDRESS RT. 2, BOX 2610, H. 111
Spouse or parent Larry O. Keeg (parent)		Refer
Occup. Pt.	Emp. By		Business Phone
Occup. Hu. or Par.	Emp. By		Business Phone
Insured By		Group		Certif.
Industrial	Yes <input checked="" type="radio"/> No	Injury Date	Time	Place
If Industrial - Emp. Address

Have you seen either Doctor previously? yes ___ no X

7-20-82 otitis bilat - Tonsillitis
Bronchitis -

Rx: Amoxacillin
d. by a Pen shot to level of cills

By Delta C Green
27 Feb 1984

